EXHIBIT AT POWELL GARDENS FEATURES INSECTS Learn About Missouri's Six-legged Wildlife

Following the Annual Butterfly Festival, Powell Gardens and Donna Brunet team-up for a photographic exhibit of butterflies, dragonflies, and other Missouri insects during September and October 2011. Brunet's images of insects have been enjoyed throughout the state in over a dozen solo photography exhibits. Wildflower images will complement the exhibit.

Photographs of free-flying insects illustrate fascinating behaviors including feeding, regulation of body temperature and mutually beneficial relationships between ants and treehoppers. An exhibit flier available in the art gallery provides information on the insects displayed in the gallery and adjacent hallways near the entrance desk.

Brunet is currently completing text and images for an updated Missouri Department of Conservation field guide to butterflies and moths of Missouri. Fine art prints from the exhibit and upcoming book will be available for purchase at Powell Gardens' gift shop. Insect photographs are great decorating options for children's rooms and bring a welcome reminder of spring and summer to any home during the winter.
